DENTINE IN A CAPSULE

REPORT OF PROGRAM

Biodentine is a biocompatible, bulk filled and bioactive material which interacts with both hard and soft tissues lead to marginal sealing preventing marginal leakage and provide protection to the underlying pulp by inducing tertiary dentine synthesis.

In the program demonstration of usage of biodentine was given. When powder and liquid are mixed with an amalgamator, setting of the material takes place leading to hydration reaction.

Clinical application of biodentine in restorative dentistry implies an intimate interaction with hard and soft tissues. This does not require any dentine surface preparation: no etching and no bonding.

Biodentine penetrates into the dentinal tubules forming tag-like structure into the tubules, which provides marginal sealing and hence protects the pulp.

REPORT OF THE EVENT

Dental fear and anxiety is a common problem in paediatric patients due to high intensity of pain. There is considerable variation in techniques used to manage them. One such contemporary technique is conscious sedation.

Participants learned that conscious sedation is a drug-induced depression of consciousness during which the patient is able to make a purposeful response to verbal stimulation, either alone or accompanied by light tactile stimulation. No interventions are required to maintain a patent airway. At this level of sedation both ventilatory and cardiovascular function are maintained.

They were taught about benefits of conscious sedation that it lets patient recover quickly and return to everyday activities soon after procedure. Conscious sedation helps reduce anxiety, discomfort, and pain during certain procedures. They were taught about the medications and local anaesthetic agents that helps inducing anaesthesia

Conscious sedation is commonly used in dentistry for children who feel anxious or panicked during complex procedures like fillings, root canals, or routine cleanings. It's also often used during minor oral surgical procedures to relax patients and minimize discomfort.

Speaker showed some clinical cases to explain that nitrous oxide has a wide spectrum of clinical applications, and can be used in general practice.
