REPORT OF THE EVENT

Biodentine is a tricalcium silicate-based material designed as a permanent dentin substitute. It is biocompatible and bioactive material. Its interactions with both hard and soft tissues lead to a marginal sealing preventing marginal leakage and provide protection to the underlying pulp by inducing tertiary dentin synthesis.

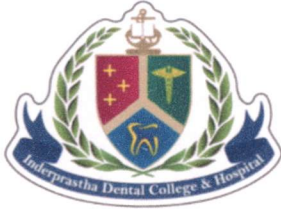

This workshop brings a comprehensive understanding of Biodentine composition, preparation properties and the mechanism of interactions with hard and soft tissues.

It explained the scientific mechanisms of the induction of these specific functions and illustrated the scientific basis beyond their clinical successful use. It also provided an overview of Biodentine clinical applications. Unlike other dentin substitutes, Biodentine application does not require any conditioning of the dentin surface and the restoration sealing is provided by micromechanical retention as Biodentine penetrates into the dentin tubules forming tag-like structures. After setting, Biodentine can be cut and reshaped like natural dentin. It can also be bonded with different types of adhesives before finishing the final restoration with composite resin.

Speaker showed some clinical cases to explain that Biodentine has a wide spectrum of clinical applications as a permanent bulk dentin substitute in endodontics, in restorative dentistry, and pediatric dentistry as a possible replacement material of formecresol.

- How PSL is beneficial in management of Class III cases
- Optimal finishing in Class III cases

Summary of the program:

A webinar was held in the Department of Orthodontics and Dentofacial Orthopedics for postgraduate students and faculty members by Dr Anand Marya on the management of class III cases using the Damon Bracket system byOrmco. Webinar was held in collaboration with Team Ormco in the seminar room of the Department of Orthodontics where Dr Anand Marya was live on Zoom from Cambodia. He took a lecture for 2 hours online and provided an insight into Class III cases to the Post Graduate students across all the years.

Program Outcome

All the faculty and PG Students learned about the state of the art technique of Class III malocclusion correction by using a self-ligating bracket system. This webinar was helpful in imparting additional knowledge on clinical handling of class III cases by using passive self-ligation mechanics and use of intraoral elastics for the same. Awareness and understanding regarding the finishing of atypical class III cases was communicated to the PG Students and faculty members through this webinar.
